All investments entail a risk of loss and you may lose money. You also understand that all investments are subject to various market, currency, economic, political, business and other risks. Investments, particularly those in international stocks and stocks of smaller companies, present numerous risks, can be very volatile and can result in a loss of principal. International investments include risks of currency fluctuation, political and economic instability and differences in financial reporting in addition to the risks present in domestic investments. Investments in smaller companies may involve greater risks than investments in larger, more mature companies. The value of debt securities frequently is reduced (sometimes dramatically) by increases in interest rates. While the financial insights we provide may assist in helping you manage your finances, you should consult with a professional investment advisor before making investment decisions or deciding on significant changes to your personal financial strategy.
